I know the Sanyo can be programmed to run at lower BTU settings and use only 300 watts at around 4,000 BTU. Researching on here led me to also look at the Mitsubishi MR Slim which has a higher SEER rating(20 vs 17) and seems like one of the more recommended mini split units.

With Mitsubishi
Electric's advanced technology, your Mr.
Slim system can extract heat, even
when temperatures fall as low as  $-25^{\circ}\text{C}$ . That's why only a Mr. Slim
heat pump is the true
evolution in year-round comfort, even in some

The PLA-RP-BA Series ceiling cassette can be fitted with an optional "i-See" corner sensor panel (PAC-SA1ME-E), one of the most advanced temperature sensors on the market.

Online Library Mitsubishi Mr Slim Plc User Manuals

The i-See sensor constantly scans the rooms seeking out hot or cold spots and automatically directs the airflow to correct the temperature.
